

No repeat partners.

A free website that assigns partners and courts, shown on each player's phone.

Courts assigned round after round as players arrive.

Every round is calculated so that no one has the same partner twice in one day, and the site avoids putting anyone on a court with the same people again. A long enough day can make a repeat unavoidable; the coordinator's page shows a note when that happens.

Court assignment based on who is present and available

No one has to sign up ahead. A late arrival goes on a court as soon as a spot opens. Taking a break or leaving for the day: tap "I'm not playing" and you are left out until you tap "I'm back".

Nothing to install

Players need no account: scan the league's QR code and tap your name. Your phone shows your court, your partner and your opponents, and changes by itself when the next round starts.

A printed lineup

When everyone has committed ahead, plan the rounds and print them: each round's courts, who waits, and an index to find your name.

Who plays next

When every court is full, whoever has played the fewest games plays first, then whoever waited last round.

The courts on a big screen

A television or any big screen can show every court in the round in progress, large enough to read from the benches.

Free, with no ads, ever

Free to run and free to play. The site is supported only by its tip jar.

Run your open play with it

4pgno.com

Coordinators: scan the code or open the address, sign in, and create your league.